

I grew up in China, where religion is a really sensitive thing. Before knowing the Gospel, my life was full of materialism, atheism and natural science. Things changed when I read a book called Hyperspace. Through that book, I found our universe is so incredibly perfect, and all physical rules cooperate together and it is hard for me to believe all of this are generated by chance. At that time, I thought there must be someone who designed all of these.

When I first came to America, I got a pick-up service from a Chinese bible class. Then I went to that class and heard the Gospel and found it is interesting. Then the class found me an English Partner Kelton. I also attended an English Conversation Class at GWU, and I met Michael Reeb there. With their help, I realized the designer is our God. I was also helped to understand the good news about Jesus by Garrett's preaching and conversations with Stephen Yin. And two months later, I thought it was a time to start a new relationship with God. By God's grace, I realized I deserve nothing because of my sin. But by faith in Christ, I could be forgiven of those sins.

Today, I stand here, since I want to announce to the world, that I want to be a Christian, I want to hold my faith and follow God and love him until the end of the age.
